Preface.

The most attractive form of history is Biography, which perpetuates the memory of individuals, and while aptly illustrating the conduct of life, conveys important lessons. History, it has been well said, does not much regard fertile soil or material wealth; but the admirable men and women that a country produces—they are the glory of the country.

The history of the race is but that of the individual writ large, and we do not know the real history of any age or country until we know about its characteristic men.

Universal history, the history of what man has accomplished in this world, is at the bottom the history of the great men who have worked here; and there can be no true criticism of a great American which is not founded upon the knowledge of his work and accomplishments in daily life.

As the failure to consider the lives of men of affairs as of historical importance is a defective feature of all biographical works heretofore published, a special feature of this work has been to include the lives of the great pioneers, merchants, manufacturers, railroad builders, and other practical men who have developed the mines, the forests and farms, built the railroads, steamboat lines and canals, set afloat and managed the shipping, organized the corporations, and introduced the new processes in science and mechanics, which have so greatly reduced the cost and promoted the comfort of living, while contributing to the power and prestige of the nation itself. They have founded the great museums, erected statues, libraries and reading rooms; and it is by them that the colleges, schools and philanthropic institutions are built and maintained; and it surely is befitting that their records should be preserved for all time in this national work of representative Americans.

That the achievements of such persons should have their public record is peculiarly proper, because such a knowledge of men whose substantial fame rests upon their attainments, character and success, must exert a wholesome influence upon the rising generation of the American people.

To preserve and perpetuate the important historical facts of personal and family history cannot fail to prove invaluable and a scource of pride and interest to the nation and to the world. Indeed, there is inherent in us a desire that our descendants should know something of us—how we live, and where we spend our lives, for the poet truly says—

"To live in hearts we leave behind
Is not to die."

In the preservation of such a record, all the progressive men of life and thought should have a national pride.

Statesmen and persons noteworthy in the church at the bar, in literature, art, science and the professions, and those who have contributed to the commercial and industrial growth of this Great Republic—each has added luster to its name.

This work is thoroughly National, covering every part of the United States, and puts in enduring form something of the history of great American merchants, manufacturers, railroad builders and other great men who have played an important part in the country's history.

This most admirable collection of contemporary biography of America's foremost leaders of life and thought will be an invaluable acquisition to world's libraries and historical archieves. The sketches of the leaders of life and thought now at the helm of America's Ecclesiastical, Civil, Military, Industrial and Commercial lines of human activity have been selected with the greatest of care from current historical works and publications and from various other sources. As Builders and Merchants they have built cities and illumined the marts of trade; in the field of science and medicine they have obtained great prominence; in the arena of statemanship they have produced men of thought and men of action, while at the bar and in the administration of Justice they have shown erudition and wisdom. As clergymen, educators and lecturers they have occupied high places; and as musicians, composers, artists, authors and poets they have contributed profusely to social life.

The courteous co-operation and words of praise received from prominent people throughout the United States, confirmed the opinion that the public is sufficiently alive to the value and importance of such a work, and the lasting benefit to be derived from placing their names, side by side with those of our most honored ones, in a work that will be found in the great public libraries and reading rooms throughout the world, and which is ultimately destined to go down to posterity as an enduring record of the most eminent people of the United States.

This volume is submitted to the public in the confidence that the careers herein described will be found stimulating to patriotism; and a potent factor in cheering and inspiring the efforts of rising generations.

The Editors.

Distinguished Americans.

Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, was born Dec. 28, 1856, in Staunton, Va., and is the son of the Rev. Joseph R Wilson and Jessie Woodrow Wilson, the former a distinguished scholar and clergyman of the Presbyterian Church of the South. His father was a native of Ohio and his mother of Scotland, and his ancestry on both sides is Scotch-Irish. His boyhood days were spent in Augusta, Ga.; at Columbia, S.C.; and at Wilmington, N.C., where he prepared for college with private tutors and at the schools of these places. His real educator, however, was his father, a scholar of high order. In 1874 he duly entered Davidson College of North Carolina, remained one year; and in the fall of 1875 went to Princeton College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1879. Following his graduation he entered the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, as a law student, and was graduated in 1881. For two years he practiced law in Atlanta, Ga. In 1883 to 1885 did graduate work at the Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore, in political economy and history; in 1885-88 he was professor of political economy at Bryn Mawr College of Pennsylvania; and then in 1888-90 he was professor in the same branches of science at Wesleyan University. In 1890 he was elected professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton University; in 1895 the department was divided and he was assigned to the chair of jurisprudence; in 1897 he was promoted to the McCormick professorship of jurisprudence and politics. In 1902 he was elected president of the University, resigning both that office and his professorship in October, 1910, immediately after his nomination for Governor of New Jersey, to which office he was elected Nov. 8, 1910, by a plurality of 40,056 votes. He was married June 24, 1885, to Miss Ellen Louise Axson, of a distinguished family of Savannah, Ga. Mrs. Wilson died at the White House on August 6, 1914. The President has three daughters, Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo. He is the author of Congressional Government; The State-Elements of Historical and Practical Politics; Division and Reunion; An Old Master, and Other Political Essays; Mere Literature and Other Essays; Life of George Washington; History of the American People; and Constitutional Government in the United States. He was married at Washington Dec. 18, 1915 to Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, of that city.

Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President of the United States, of 2649 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D.C., was born May 5, 1879, in Jersey City, N.J. He attended the St. Bridget's Parochial School and subsequently entered St. Peter's College, from which he was graduated in 1899 with the degree of B.A. He was admitted to the bar of New Jersey in 1902 and practiced law in Jersey City. He was married in 1904 to Miss Mary Byrne, of Jersey City; and they have six children, four girls and two boys. He served as a member of the New Jersey House of Assembly in 1907-10; in 1910 was appointed private secretary to Governor Wilson and in 1912 clerk of the Supreme Court of New Jersey. He continued, however, to act as secretary to the Governor until the governor resigned to become President. On March 4, 1913, he was appointed secretary to the President.

Henry Lee Myers, Democratic United States Senator from Montana, of Hamilton, Mont., was born Oct. 9, 1862, on a farm in Cooper County, Mo., and is a son of Henry M. and Maria Adams Myers. His father was a native of Jefferson County, Va.; and his mother's family was from Bourbon County, Ky. He grew to manhood on his father's farm; received an academic education; taught school and studied law; and was admitted to the bar and engaged in the practice of law in his native state. In 1893 he moved to Hamilton, Mont., and there engaged in the practice of law; and has since lived there. In 1894 he was elected county attorney, and was re-elected in 1896. In 1898 he was elected State Senator. In 1907 he was appointed judge of the District Court of the fourth judicial district of Montana for a partial term; and in 1908 was elected to the same position for a full term; and was serving it when elected by the Montana Legislature on March 2, 1911, United States Senator for a term beginning March 4, 1911. In 1912 he was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. In 1916 he was nominated, without opposition, by his party for a second term as United States Senator, and was elected. In 1896 he married Miss Nora Doran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Doran, of Hamilton, Mont. They have one child, Mary Annetta Myers, 19 years of age. His term will expire March 3, 1923.

William F. Kirby, Democratic United States Senator from Arkansas, of Little Rock, Ark., was born Nov. 16, 1867, in Miller County, Ark. He was educated in neighborhood schools; studied law at Cumberland University of Lebanon, Tenn., graduating in January, 1885, and immediately opened an office for the practice of his profession at Texarkana, Ark. He was twice elected representative and served in the sessions of the general assembly of the State of Arkansas of 1893 and 1897. He was married to Ella Kirby at Texarkana on Oct. 19, 1898. He was elected State Senator from the twenty-first district and served in the Senate an the sessions of 1899 and 1901. He was appointed by the legislature and revised the statutes for the State, Kirby's Digest of the Statutes of Arkansas in 1904. He was elected attorney general in 1907 and 1908 and moved to Little Rock. He was defeated in 1907 for nomination, equivalent to election for Governor by small plurality in a race against two other candidates. He served as assistant special counsel for the State in its successful litigation to uphold the two cent passenger fare law and the rates established by the Arkansas Railroad Commission. He was elected associate justice of the Supreme Court of Arkansas for an eight-year term beginning Nov. 1, 1910, after being nominated in the Democratic primary election, in which he carried seventy of the seventy-five counties. In 1914 in the Democratic primary election for the nomination for United States Senator he carried forty of the seventy-five counties of the State, and upon the face of the returns was shown to have won the election. One of the counties later changed its returns, increasing his opponent's majority of four hundred votes, which threw the election against him and necessitated a contest before the State Democratic Central Committee. Upon appeal from an adverse decision by the committee to the State Democratic Convention, notwithstanding he had three hundred and twenty-one instructed delegates as against his opponent' three hundred and eight, he was finally declared defeated by a majority of 213 out of 136,000 votes cast in the primary. He was elected to the United States Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his predecessor at a special election held Nov. 7, 1916 and resigned as associate justice.

He is a trustee of Delaware College; a member of the Wilmington Club; and the University Club of Philadelphia. He has been chairman of the New Castle County Republican Committee since 1894, with the exception of two years, when he was State chairman. He was a delegate to the National Convention in 1896 at St. Louis which nominated William McKinley for President. In 1916 he was elected president of the Wilmington and New Castle County Public Building Commission. He was again elected to the United States Senate, for a full term of six years, on Nov. 5, 1918, by the following vote: Lewis Heisler Ball, Republican, 21,519; Willard Saulsbury, Democrat, 20,113; and William Connor, Socialist, 420.

Walter Evans Edge, Republican United States Senator from New Jersey, of Atlantic City, N. J., was born on Nov. 20, 1873, in Philadelphia, Pa. Shortly afterwards the family moved to Pleasantville, N.J., where the boy entered the public schools and graduated. At the age of sirteen he secured a position with an advertising agency in Atlantic City; and a few years later, when the proprietor died, purchased the business. He founded the Atlantic City Daily Press; and later purchased the Atlantic City Evening Union, publishing both newspapers in conjunction with his advertising business, which he expanded until branch offices were established in New York, London, Paris, Brussells and elsewhere. Mr. Edge is a widower with one son, Walter Evans Edge. In 1897, 1898 and 1899 he served as journal clerk of the New Jersey Senate; and in 1901-04 he was secretary of that body. He volunteered in the War with Spain in 1898; and was mustered into the service with Company F. Fourth New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, of which he was commissioned second lieutenant. After the war he served as captain of Company L. Third Regiment New Jersey National Guard; he served on the personal staffs of Governors Murphy and Stokes of New Jersey; and subsequently was lieutenant colonel and chief of ordnance department on the staff of the major general commanding the New Jersey National Guard. In 1904 Colonel Edge was a presidential elector; and in 1908 an alternate delegate at large to Republican National Convention. He was elected to the New Jersey Assembly from Atlantic County in 1909; and to the New Jersey Senate in 1910, and again in 1913. During his legislative career in New Jersey he served as majority leader in both branches; and also as president of the Senate; and for five weeks in 1915 as acting Governor. He was elected Governor of New Jersey in 1916 with a plurality of 69,647 over the Democratic candidate, a vote which exceeded by 18,003 the largest plurality ever received by a gubernatorial candidate in the State. He was nominated in the Republican primaries for the United States Senate in 1918 with a plurality of 71,575, and in the following November he was elected to succeed Senator David Baird and to serve for the full term of six years; the vote, including both civilians and soldiers, was as follows: Edge, Republican, 179,022; La Monte, Democratic, 153,743; Reily, Socialist, 14,723; Wallace, Single Tax, 2,352; Day, National Prohibition, 5,816; Edge's plurality, 25,279.

Marvel Mills Logan, Lawyer and Business President, of 901 Inter-Southern Building, Louisville, Ky., was born Jan. 7, 1875, in Brownsville, Ky. He was educated in the public schools of his native state. In 1896-1912 he practiced law in Brownsville, Ky. In 1912-16 he was first assistant attorney-general of Kentucky; and in 1916-17 was attorney-general, resigning in 1917; and was appointed chairman of the Kentucky State Tax Commission, resigning that position in 1918. He is vice-president of the Kentucky Rock Asphalt Company; and is engaged in the practice of law with Eli H. Brown, Jr. He is a Mason, and Grand Master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Kentucky; and resides in Frankfort, Ky.

John Walter Smith, Democratic United States Senator from Maryland, of Snow Hill, Md., was born Feb. 5, 1845, in Snow Hill, Md. His ancestors were among the first settlers of that part of the State; and his maternal grandfather, Judge William Whittington, was one of the early circuit judges of Maryland. His father, John Walter Smith, and his mother both died before he was five years old. He was educated at private schools and at Union Academy, and began his business career at the age of eighteen years. He is engaged in the lumber business in Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina; is president of the First National Bank of Snow Hill; and is a director in many business and financial institutions. He was elected to represent Worcester County in the Senate of Maryland in 1889; and was successively re-elected in 1893 and 1897. He was president of the State Senate during the session of 1894. He was nominated and elected to Congress from the first Congressional district of Maryland in 1898. He was elected Governor of Maryland by over 12,000 plurality in 1899; and served a Governor from 1900 to 1904. He was a delegate at large to the Democratic National Convention held at Kansas City in 1900; to the St. Louis Convention in 1904; the Convention of Baltimore in 1912; and at St. Louis in 1916. He was nominated by direct vote of the members of the Democratic party of Maryland on Nov. 5, 1907, by a plurality of 17,931, at the first primary election held in his State for United States Senator, to serve the term beginning March 4, 1909, and was thereafter elected United States Senator for that term by the General Assembly of the State on Jan. 15, 1908. He was elected United States Senator at the same session of the Maryland Legislature, on March 24, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. William Pinkney White for unexpired term ending March 3, 1909. At the senatorial primary election held throughout the whole State of Maryland on Sept. 15, 1914, to elect delegates to the State Convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for the Senate, Senator Smith defeated the opposing candidate in every county of the state and in every ward of Baltimore City, an unprecedented result. Every delegate to the State Convention went with instructions from the people to vote for him, and he received a unanimous vote on the first ballot. At the ensuing general election on Nov. 3, 1914, he defeated his Republican opponent by a plurality of over 15,000; and was thus nominated and re-elected to succeed himself for the term which ends on March 3, 1921.

Truman Handy Newberry, Republican United States Senator from Michigan, of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., was born on Nov. 5, 1864, in Detroit, Mich. He received a fair education at private schools; the Kentucky Military Institute, near Frankfort, Ky.; the University of the South of Sewanee, Tenn.; at the University of Virginia, and at the University of Heidelberg of Baden, Germany. He subsequently studied law under professors Minor and Southall at the University of Virginia; and in the office of Harris, McDisick and Turley in Memphis. In 1877 he got the license to practice in the courts of law and chancery of Shelby County, Tenn. In December, 1878 he moved to Yazoo City, Miss., where he engaged in the practice of his profession and the varied pursuits of a cotton planter. He was a delegate to the Chicago Convention which nominated Cleveland and Stevenson; and served as temporary chairman of the Democratic National Convention in 1904. He was elected to fifty-third, fifty-fourth, fifty-fifth, fifty-sixth, fifty-seventh, fiftyeighth and fifty-ninth Congresses, and was re-elected to the sixtieth Congress, receiving all the votes cast; he had no opposition either for renomination or election. He was the candidate of his party for the office of Speaker in the fifty-eighth, fifty-ninth and sixtieth Congresses. On August 1, 1907, Mr. Williams was chosen at a primary election to be the candidate of the Democratic party for United States Senate, and on January 23, 1908, elected by the legislature to succeed Hon. H. D. Money, and took his seat April 4, 1911. He was a delegate to the Baltimore Convention which nominated Woodrow Wilson. He was renominated and re-elected United States Senator for the term beginning March 4, 1917, without opposition.
